Acknowledgments

This book was made possible by the support of three institutions. I am most grateful to the National Science Foundation and especially to Dr. Myles G. Boylan, Program Director in the Course, Curriculum and Laboratory Improvement Program of the Division of Undergraduate Education, who encouraged this project from its inception. I deeply appreciate the support provided to me by the United States Naval Academy, where I was privileged to be a Distinguished Visiting Professor while writing this book. The Global Trade Analysis Project (GTAP), particularly Thomas Hertel and Terrie Walmsley, have been tremendously generous in their encouragement and support of this project. I am also deeply grateful to Karen Thierfelder, a longtime friend and colleague, and to Sherman Robinson, who has been a generous teacher and friend. I have learned much about models and policy analysis from our long and rewarding collaboration. Victoria Greenfield, Kurtis Swope, and Katherine Smith – my colleagues at the Academy – acted as beta testers and reviewers and provided insightful critiques and many helpful suggestions and edits on earlier drafts of the book. I owe a special thanks to my students at the Naval Academy, who over the course of four years uncovered many errors and oversights, and who often provided fresh takes on CGE models and economic theory. My editor, Scott Parris, and Adam Levine and Tilak Raj at Cambridge University Press facilitated this project in every way possible while guiding it through to publication. I also thank Roger Betancourt, Cheryl Christensen, Neil Conklin, Praveen Dixit, Aziz Elbehri, Cheryl Flax-Davidson, Rae Jean Goodman, Kenneth Hanson, Barry Krissoff, Gene Mathia, Sara Pastor, Alan Pocinki, Ken Reinert, David Skully, Agapi Somwaru, and Deborah Tanno, each of whom, in different ways, helped to bring this project to fruition. Channing Arndt, Rob McDougall, Jeffrey Round, Marcelle Thomas, Marinos Tsigas, Dominique van der Mensbrugh, Frank van Tongeren, and three anonymous reviewers provided many helpful ideas, corrections, and suggestions.

All remaining errors are my own responsibility, and I encourage readers to contact me about them or to offer their comments or suggestions on the book.
